Avaya Tailors Unified Communications as Small Business Productivity Booster...

"Avaya says that its unified communications system can preserve the productivity of small business workers who are stuck at home. Most small business owners and managers believe that employee sick days and stress are the top two contributors to lost productivity. Furthermore they believe that unscheduled absences cost their businesses money and productivity losses." Read More > 3-31-08 eWeek

Avaya Press Room >>> Small Businesses Can Lose Big if They Ignore The True Cost of Lost Productivity

Small business owners, presidents, and CEOs in the United States believe productivity suffers when employees can't get into the office due to bad weather or personal needs. Most estimated that expenses approach $20,000 annually. Read More >

Survey Shows Unified Communication Can Provide the Flexibility to Drive Productivity

Avaya released findings of a new survey revealing most small businesses agree that productivity suffers when an employee is out of the office unexpectedly. Despite this belief, few actually calculated that cost. Read More > 3-31-08 tmc.net

OPINION: Avaya's Small Business Phone Ploy

I like the fact Avaya surveyed small businesses and then changed its product to reflect what those small businesses said. Missed work for whatever reason (including the 20% of small businesses hurt by bad weather six or more days per year), costs big money. Avaya's answer? Make it easier to be part of the company phone system whether you're at work, at home or on your cell phone. Read More > 4-15-08 COMPUTERWORLD

Avaya: Employee stress, sick days top two lost productivity contributors

A survey of small business (under 100 employees) executives found that while organizations generally understand they are losing productivity when an employee is out of the office, few understand the true costs associated with those unscheduled out-of-office events.
